

Streamlining the hydrogen ecosystem is essential for India to achieve net-zero targets

Dr N. Rajalakshmi

Electrolysers used in the production of hydrogen from water are electrochemical energy-conversion devices. These find application in most areas requiring decarbonisation, with higher potential in sectors such as transport and power, which are currently carbon-intensive.